Friendship Day

Consider celebrating one or many of your friends on July 30--the International Day of Friendship.

Send flowers to your friend.

Send your friend flowers with a note to show how grateful you are. You can pick up flowers and deliver them yourself, or you can send flowers through online services.

Start a tradition with your friend.

If you don't already have a tradition with your friend, start one! It doesn't need to be anything super creative; crack open a bottle of wine and cook together, play a game or have a potluck with a group of friends.

Lend your friend a helping hand.

Show your friend how much you appreciate him/her by offering to lend them a hand with something with which they need help on Friendship Day (or any day, of course!).

Share a meal with your friend.

Treat your friend to a meal where you can catch up on life. Take him/her out for lunch or dinner or to a favorite spot for old times' sake. Whatever the case, make the meal more special than your typical afternoon or evening grabbing a bite.

Send your friend a card.

You can always send a simple card. Cards (and letters!) are nice to receive.

Share your appreciation.

You can — and should — tell your friend how much you appreciate him/her. You can say this in three words: I love you! It's as simple as that.
